WHAT THE TRAMP WANTED.

In the neighborhood of Twelfth and Market streets, Oakland, there are several feminine meddles living within a block of one another. Dr. Myra Knox's sign reads simply "Dr. Knox," and Dr. Annette Buckell has dropped her Christian name, too. The other day a tramp made his appearance at the office of one of the doctors, and she responded to his summons.

"Beg yer pardon, mum," said the tramp, "but might I trouble yer fer a pair of the doctor's old pants?"

"He hasn't any old ones," said the lady, "try the doctor next door."

And from one to another the tramp was shifted along the row of women doctors until the whole neighborhood was shrieking with laughter.—Town Topics.

A ROMANCE OF TODAY.

He met her where the people came and went in busy troops, Where the never weary newsboys filled the air with maddening whoops; She was fair to see and sweetly said: "You're lookin' out of sight"; "Well I guess," said he, "you wouldn't make a clock run down for spite."

There where the people hurried in the busy thoroughfare He asked: "Say, what's the matter with us dravin' to a pair?"

She glanced up coyly at him, while her dimpled cheeks grew red, "Chase yourself around this evening and we'll frame it," she said.

THE WOMAN AND THE RIB.

Adam gave his rib
To make woman's shape;
(Thus the story's writ,
There is no escape!)

Many an Arctic whale,
Wifeless of the blame,
Also gives his rib
For to make the same.

I sorrow not for man—
He gets his riblet back;
But for the por old whale,
Alack, my friends, alack!

Put the bung in your
Barrel, Willie,
And charge the money
Spent
To "vain ambition,"
Willie
To be a
President!

Put the bung in your
Barrel, Willie,
There's little left,
But then
You have some sappy
Journals
And it may fill
Again!

THE REAL NEED.

"Why not a school for teaching novel-writing?"—Herald.

When everybody's writing
Novels by the score,
Why attempt to teach them
How to grind out more?

I'm strong myself on stories,
It isn't hard to tell 'em,
But I'd like to find a college
That will teach me how to sell 'em.

The Irish are scarcely less noted for their gallantry than for their wit, and an example of this virtue is found in the case of an Irish judge who presided at a trial in which the plaintiffs were a lady and her daughter.

In summing up the case, the judge thus gallantly began:

"Gentlemen of the jury: Everything in this case seems plain—except Mrs. O'Toole and her charming laughter."—Youth's Companion.

"Mr. Niles," said the parsimonious landlady, "will you have some cereal coffee?"

"No, thanks, madam, I prefer mine all at once."—What to Eat.
